What is a Complaint?

A complaint is defined as:

“Any oral or written expression of dissatisfaction, whether justified or not, from, or on behalf of, a person about the provision of, or failure to provide, a financial service, by our firm.”

What makes a Complaint?

A complaint must be in relation to the services received from the firm or matters arising whilst the complainant is or has been a customer of the firm.

The following are all examples of what makes a complaint. The list not exhaustive, however.

- If the complainant thinks he has received misleading information
- If the complainant thinks he has received poor advice
- If the complainant thinks that the advertising material is misleading
- If there is a fraud involved
- If the complainant thinks that personal data or confidential information has been mis-used

Complaints Process

Receipt of the complaint by the firm

Upon receipt of the complaint, details of the complaint along with the original complaint where the complaint is made in writing, will be sent to the Complaints Handler.

Petricore Partners will ensure where a verbal complaint is received, full details are disclosed to the Complaints Handler to allow them to acknowledge the complaint.

If we are able to resolve the complaint to the client's satisfaction within three working days of receipt, a final response can be issued to the client including the firm's conclusion of the complaint and a summary of investigations. If this is not possible, the complaint must be acknowledged by the Complaint Handler and the process for handling the complaint set out.

Acknowledgement of a complaint

The acknowledgement of a complaint will come from the Complaints Handler. The acknowledgement will take place as soon as practically possible but no later than five working days of receipt of the complaint by the firm.

This will be in the form of a holding letter which states that a complaint has been received and sets out the firm's understanding of the nature and details of the complaint. The acknowledgement letter will mention that the complaint will be investigated as soon as possible and provide details on when and how further contact will be made. A client can be requested to provide authority for the firm to obtain any information from third parties, such as product providers.

Recording a complaint

The complaint will be logged and its details recorded, including the measurements taken for resolution. This will allow for sufficient reporting to the firm's management and ensure that a complaint meets the relevant time limits.

Where a "potential" complaint is highlighted to the Complaints Handler, this should be recorded as such and records maintained and reported on effectively.

Investigating complaints

The investigation will be carried out by the Complaint Handler who must undertake a balanced and objective investigation without any pre-conceptions aimed at simply identifying the facts of the case.

The investigation will include a review of the client file, with particular regard to the complaint having been made. This will involve an element of fact finding to compare the information held on file with the complaint raised by the client.

Customer contact

The adviser about whom the complaint is made, is unable to contact the client until the complaint has been resolved or prior approval is obtained from the Complaints Handler. Where contact with the client is required in relation to a matter outside of the complaint, an alternative adviser may be provided for a period of time.

Final response

As soon as the complaint investigation has been completed a formal letter and response will be sent to the client and a copy sent to a firm's PI insurers.

The Final Response will be in writing and must be one of the following:

- Accepts the Complaint and offers redress or remedial action where appropriate
- Offers redress of remedial action but does not accept the complaint
- Rejects the complaint confirming reasons why

If it is considered that redress is appropriate, it will be detailed in this response and confirmation of how this was calculated must be shown.
